

Utah product, not one player from any other state participating. Stayner, pitcher has been the mainstay of the team on the field of play. His twirling has been unparalleled in this section, and at all times he has proved a puzzle to opponents. Chet Green, a heady catcher and general all round ball fiend, has a splendid batting and fielding record to his credit, while the Dewey brothers field giants, have also done some magnificent hitting. George Gleason, the second baseman, is real league timber, both with the willow and when at the base. Joe Wallis, Garland's first sacker, is the hitter who has brought the Garlandites out of some tight holes against Logan and Willard, besides playing a consistent game throughout the season. Bob Bowcutt, right field, has proved quite a utility man of excellent caliber, while Ross Evans has assisted his team greatly in several positions, but has best served his friends as a pitcher, having been in splendid form with the sphere on more than one occasion.

Garland's record is the best in the northern valleys of Utah and has come out clean in every way.

THE TOWN OF GARLAND

Is situated about twenty miles west and north of Brigham City, the county seat of Box Elder county, the greatest fruit county in Utah.

Garland is located in the center of a rich, fertile agricultural district and its future is an assured fact, as the progress of every section of land within a large radius of the town itself shows indications of great growth.

Industrially, this town is head and shoulders above everything else in the valley. One thousand people will shortly be the figure of Garland's population.

Politically, the town has been Republican but there are changes occurring that will tend to cause the future situation to be doubtful.

The town is a sugar town and each day throughout the year large shipments of the beet product are hauled to the local depot for shipment to the eastern market and consumption by a people who imagine the beet is pounded into sweetening by Colt's .45 automatic pistols instead of modern, first-class machinery provided with every known, up-to-date safety device, operated by men equally as skilled as are the mechanics in naval yards where dreadnaughts are turned out. The local factory employs hundreds of men, each taking some part in the process of refining sugar for the savages of New York and other eastern states, where today the pistol, formerly the chief characteristic of the West has become the leading factor of Bowery arguments.

And in Garland we find a town absolutely free from crime so far as the citizens are concerned and rather we see all around a spirit of commercial activity, thrift, enterprise and continual advancement.

There are stores of all kinds in

W. L. GROVER,
Mayor of Garland.

this wide-awake financial and commercial center of the Bear River valley, and here we find all kinds of concerns operating of which the following are prominent:

Ritter Bros. Drug company. (two stores.)

Garland boasts of a well-kept city park and athletic grounds, the pride of its sport-loving public.

The cottage homes of Garland are better than the similar type house in Salt Lake City or Ogden for the reason that each Garland cottage not only has its hot and cold water equipment, electric lights, bath-rooms, etc., but also are provided with cement side walks and each cottage has its own orchard of apple, cherry, plum and pear trees. These cottages are located on lots sufficient in size for the occupants to raise enough vegetables for family consumption.

There are no saloons in Garland! It is absolutely prohibition and Garland is one of the very few "dry" towns.

Here we have scholastic, library and other facilities. The new school building is a credit to any community five times the size of Garland. Andrew Carnegie, the new Scotch lord to be, has donated $8,000 toward a magnificent public library building. A new $30,000.00 church has just been completed. And other buildings are now being contemplated and tentative plans prepared.

Nearly half a million dollars a year changes hands at Garland! And Garland not yet a town of 1,000 population! Think of it you who seek a home.

What can YOU do? If you want to farm come to Garland and you will be shown land upon which you can raise an abundance of alfalfa, hay, barley, oats or other cereals, sugar beets, fruit trees, berries of any and all kinds; or in fact anything good can be raised in this district and only those who are not diligent fail to come out ahead.

Garland is growing rich, although the town is young. Garland will and must grow richer and if you are ambitious, anxious to succeed, come and make your home here and prosper with the town.

Garland enjoys a climate that cannot be surpassed. The social conditions here are such that any person of average education and refinement will find sufficient entertainment and pleasure.

Your home is at Garland if you are seeking a place to call home. A small investment here means a sure and safe return plus contentment and happiness if you live at Garland, in summer a city of roses.

Facts of Interest about the Town of Garland

By Joseph Jensen.

Garland, while quite a manufacturing and business center in the Bear River valley, is also one of the most ideal home towns in the West. With all the modern conveniences, such as electric lights, water system, two sewer systems and the religious and social conditions existing, one can not but admit this to be true.

The streets are graded and on either side you will see a beautiful row of shade trees, which from early spring until late autumn, give it the appearance of one large park.

The side walks are paved in all directions from the center of the city and the home surroundings are beautifully laid out with lawns, shrubbery and flower beds, and as a rule the walks around the homes are paved, making it both pleasant and healthful.

The "Ladies' Self Culture club, a social organization is doing a great deal to encourage the beautifying of and keeping in a sanitary condition the homes; every year prizes are offered for the best kept home surroundings and while they are advocating these things in precept, the members practice what they preach and this puts an impetus to the keeping of the homes in modern fashion which makes it both beautiful and healthful.

Through the influence of the wide-awake citizens of Garland they have succeeded in getting the school board to erect one of the largest school houses in the county. A large twelve-room building, equipped with all conveniences and heated throughout with steam, was erected a year ago at a cost of $35,000.00. This commodious building is so constructed, that additions can be made without altering the present building. And we are looking for a high school to be established here in the very near future.

Garland is also the center of what is known as the Bear River stake, which means that all the surrounding wards, consisting of eleven separate organizations, will meet here at least once a month to consider matters of importance to them.

Besides the local buildings owned by the Garden ward for church purposes, this stake has now in course of construction a very commodious building, consisting of nine separate class rooms and an auditorium that will accommodate in the neighborhood of fourteen hundred people. In fact it is one of the largest buildings in the state north of Salt Lake City. In another six weeks this building will be in readiness for the seats to be installed.

The social conditions are well taken care of, a large social hall is owned by the ward, in which theaters and dances are carried on nearly every evening in the week except Sundays.

The city owns its own park near the center of the city which is set out with beautiful shade trees on either side and in the center of these grounds a splendid baseball diamond is kept in first-class style, and because of the encouragement given this national game, Garland has for years maintained one of the best amateur teams in the state. The boys have played from Pocatello, Idaho on the north to Lehi, Utah on the south.

Believing that a certain amount of religious training, together with the best possible school education, and that mingled with the necessary amusements to make life pleasant, is all that is necessary to make life happy, and thereby inculcate into the hearts of the people the necessity of being the best of citizens we say Garland is your home.

JOS. JENSEN.

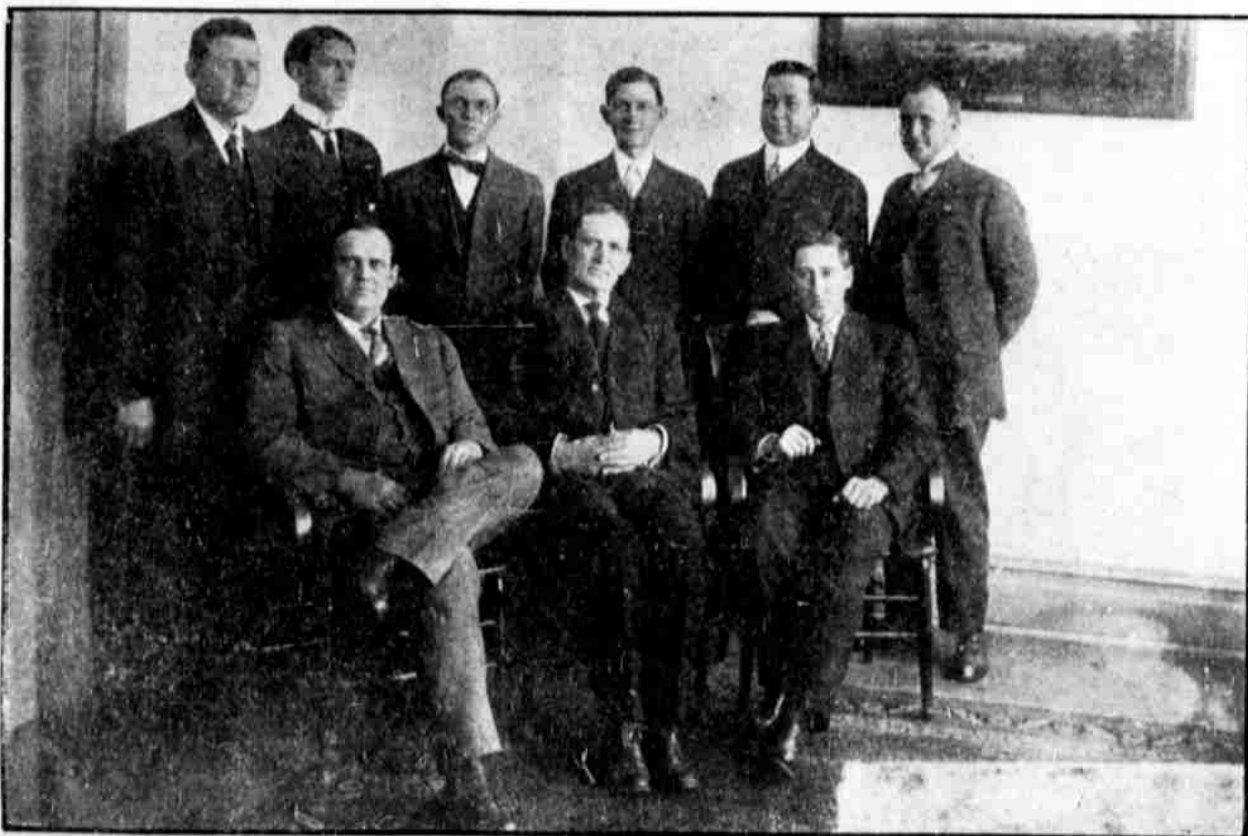

A good foundation having been laid for a greater Garland the structure will no doubt grow faster in the next ten years than it has in the past ten years as all these social conditions are now firmly established thereby making life most agreeable.

In making this a GREATER GARLAND we invite all good citizens to participate, who are looking for a pleasant home town.

The Fire Department of Garland

In the summer of 1911, under the reign of J. C. Wheelon, an effort was begun to arouse an interest in the fire protection of Garland. The town board bought a double tank chemical engine costing about $400.00. Nothing was done with the machine whatever, but to put it away.

In July 1912 the town board, under the leadership of W. L. Grover appointed James Jensen and Joseph Lewis to see about organizing a volunteer fire department. They succeeded to some extent in getting together several of the boys and appointed Bert Mortenson, chief; F. D. Baird, assistant chief; R. H. Francis, secretary. The boys got the chemical engine in shape so they could use it and did so to good advantage at several fires, viz the Manausa building and on the Vanfleet buildings.
